Thanks to the efforts of St. Johns' lifetime residents Dewey and Esther Farr, the Apache County Historical Society Museum opened its doors more than 40 years ago. It holds a comprehensive selection of historical relics and is well worth return visits by residents, visitors, tourists, and their families or organizations.

The museum has a surprisingly large breadth of artifacts depicting life in Apache County as the Apache, Hopi, Navajo, and Zuni Tribes, and Spanish and Mormon settlers clashed and meshed throughout the history of our communities. These displays include arrowheads, firearms, written histories, diaries, photographs, tools, musical instruments, household items, and dioramas representing the daily lives of our early diverse cultures.
